

After Meech Lake

by Dr. Ian S. Rennie

Each of us comes to Meech out of our own background. As far back as I can remember I have loved Canada and have wanted to be identified with Canadians. Having had the privilege of living in other countries, when I returned I felt like the Pope, wanting to kneel and kiss the ground. This sense of belonging and identity I receive happily as a gift from God.

Then I have had the privilege of travelling in all the Canadian provinces, living in several divergent regions, and having a deep feeling for each one. This 24th of May weekend our son-in-law took my wife and I to what was a new part of Canada for us, the Laurentian hills north of Montreal. There his great-grandfather had come as a Swiss-French Presbyterian missionary in the last century. And as our son-in-law shared his affection for the region, its beauty and its people, we found that we heartily concurred. What a remarkable country and people God has given us.

Now, in the midst of this joy, Meech is dead. Even if Canada holds together, there will be discontinuities that most of us in our most technicolour dreams never expected. But we will pray that God in his mercy will hold us together. However, it may be God's will for the furtherance of the gospel that Quebec become independent. Quebecois, as long as they were subservient to "les anglais," tended to resist the evangelical gospel. But after 1976 when the Parti-Quebecois came to power, and the Francophones felt that they were "maître de leurs" in Quebec, their desires began to come down, and tens of thousands came to Christ. The further step of independence, in God's plan, may thus result in a great spiritual awakening in Quebec.

So I am torn. I pray for Quebec to remain part of Canada. But if God gives independence, although I will feel emotional pain, I will pray God that He will use this situation to open people to the good news.

A friend from Sherbrooke, Quebec, was on the phone recently, telling me of the new unity that Leighton Ford's Mission Quebec has brought between Francophone and Anglophone evangelists in his area. If independence comes, we need to pray that Anglo-phones and allophone (those whose first language is neither French nor English) Christians will stay, and together with their Francophone brothers and sisters, will see a church emerge which reaches to all in Quebec and will be a great praise to our Lord.

EVANGELISM EXPLOSION

Student Leadership in Evangelism Grows

In the past year, a growing emphasis on evangelism in campus has found expression in a variety of ways. The OBC, student council, Evangelism committee sponsored a team of students from the College and Seminary who did street witnessing in downtown Toronto each Friday evening. More than 50 students were involved with 20 committed full-time. The student leader, Sean Elhoft arranged for training and for the program to be credited as field education.

In the spring, the OBC OTS Cabinet heard the committee's proposals for creating greater awareness of students' efforts and for developing structures to meet training needs. The Cabinet affirmed the students' efforts and said that the College will look into offering Evangelism as a major when the Chair of Evangelism is filled.

The Vision 2000 committee, an Evangelism sub-committee with a representative from OTS, began preparing for concerted outreach to neighbors in the future.

Last February, the student council invited the community to see Foraker and Son, an outreach endeavor.

In a new venture, OBC has instituted an Evangelism Emphasis Week October 22-26. Dr. William Iverson, senior pastor, Shephard Presbyterian Church, Florida, will teach on lifestyle, evangelism and discipleship, student organizers want him to do "hands on" training as well.

On the Tuesday (October 23) Iverson will speak at the Seminary's Reach the City conference, which is open to the public. Cost is $10. Iverson is known among other things for creative work in a poverty stricken area of Newark, N.J. He has strong interests in transcultural ministry and, in his more recent work as an educator, in integrating academic and practical approaches to learning.

Evangelism Leadership Developed

by Krista P. Lear

In mid-May, Leighton Ford Ministries (LFM) and the Seminary co-sponsored an intensive five-day Evangelism Leadership Seminar for 28 international young leaders.

Feedback from those involved was very positive. Organizers said it was one of the best seminars they had been able to offer. Leighton Ford said "OTS people have been wonderful to work with." Participants used phrases like "very practical" and "extremely relevant for the 1990s" to describe the mix of theory and application offered.

Involvement was by invitation only. OTS chose 13 of the participants and LFM, the rest, with LFM covering all the costs. Most of the seven women and 21 men were between 24 and 35 and had seminary training.

Leighton Ford started the twice-yearly seminars in 1987 to help fulfill his vision of nurturing a new generation of evangelists and leaders. Ford said he wants to see participants acquire a sharpened focus on the gospel with a broader awareness of people and culture.

Dr. David Sherbino, professor of New Testament, OTS, and faculty coordinator for the seminar reported that participants appreciated the perspectives they gained from the wide range of lecturers. Ford and a number of guests lectured on evangelism issues.

Three Canadians led sessions: William Wan, vice-president, John McLaverty, OTS lecturer in evangelism and senior team leader at Spring Garden Baptist Church, Toronto, and Don Poteski, then acting general director of Inter-University Christian Fellowship, Canada. Robert Record, dean of the Seminary and senior pastor, Bell Shoals Baptist Church, Brandon, Florida, focused on the leadership side.

On two evenings, the 28 shared the gospel in a variety of settings. Mark Petersen, the OTS student co-ordinator, said that the chaplain of a detention centre wrote to say "it was a terrific evening."

The cross-cultural mix was also highly rated. Kenyat, Indian, Brazilian, Bolivian, Korean, Chinese, American and Canadian participants enriched the proceedings with their own perspectives.

David Sherbino says that the Seminary hopes to be able to host the seminar again.

Mixed Year-end Results

by David J. Pavay

The generosity of our constituency has resulted in a record level of financial support for the College and Seminary budget. Donations to our operating funds, Commitment to Excellence campaign, and bursary funds has reached a total $1,750,000 during our fiscal year ended May 31, 1990.

But regrettable, we were not able to achieve a balanced operating budget. The Commitment to Excellence campaign has understandably captured the imaginations of our donors; it has drawn gifts which otherwise would have been designated for the operating fund. As a result, our 1990 donations of $830,000 to the operating fund are $100,000 below the annual levels of the past five years.

This donation shortfall combined with tuition shortfall and significant non-budgeted expenses has resulted in a deficit to the operating fund of $350,000. The College and Seminary were hit by recently increased employer contributions to provincial and federal employee benefit programs. As well, we had to make urgent repairs to residence washrooms and the seminary air conditioning unit.

This deficit is in sharp contrast with the $20,000 surplus in the operating fund in each of the past two years. To deal with this serious situation, we are committed to proceeding carefully through fiscal 1991. At the same time we live with the tension of fully carrying out our mandate to train and develop men and women in the Christian faith. The Board of Governors and OBC/OTS administrators will regularly undertake critical assessments of our financial health. We are already putting plans in place to keep the deficit from growing and to develop new sources of income.

The amounts mentioned are subject to the audit currently underway by Ernst and Young. Audited financial statements will be presented to the Board and Coporation in September.

David J. Pavay, CA, is vice-president of administration and finance.

Digest

New OBC Bursary
The Paisley family of Stouffville, ON, will help two African students a year study at OBC. The students, who must be committed to full-time Christian ministry in Africa and show potential for academic achievement and leadership, will each receive financial aid of $10,000 from a bursary.

At the request of Dr. William Wan, vice-president, OBC, the family agreed to let the bursary be named after their son-in-law, Dr. David Meech.

Dr. Wan wrote, "I am keenly interested that African students will be inspired by David Meech's spiritual and scholarly example to achieve the best for his highest." Dr. Meech, BEd, '81, did his doctoral thesis on Evangelical Environmental Ethics at the University of Toronto. He will return home to Ghana in November, with his family, to direct a development program for the Northern Evangelistic Association, which he helped start as a high school student in 1971.

Student gifts
At the graduation banquet last May, the OBC student body presented a $1,500 cheque to MATH (Mission Advancing Theological Education) to enable it to send more textbooks to seminaries and Bible colleges in developing countries. Students raised $10,000 to which a local businessman added $500.

The OBC graduating class gave $200 to the Community Life Department to purchase a microwave for commuter students.

New Courses This Fall

On Wednesday mornings the Seminary is offering The Healing Ministry of the Church. Dr. David Shebano, professor of pastoral studies, OTS, will team teach with Dr. Roy Matheson, professor of New Testament. OTS, and Bruce Royat, M.D. associate professor, Department of Medicine, the University of Toronto and Director of the Emergency Department, Toronto Hospital. Dr. Shebano coaches healing chapels twice a year at the Seminary providing both a ministry and a model for students. Dr. Matheson has a special interest in the ministry of deliverance from demonic forces. Dr. Royat will add depth in the area of medicine to the course which will deal broadly with healing.

At the College, the Department of Ministry Studies is inaugurating Mrs. Beth Posterski. This course, required for students in Early Childhood Studies, will also be of interest to other students as an elective. Mrs. Posterski has a particular interest in this field as a collector of children's picture books

A Vision for Evangelism

by Janet Redding

As I sat among over 700 delegates at the Vision 2000 Consultation May 16-20, a sense of thanksgiving filled my heart. I realized how fortunate I was to be among respected Christian leaders, and to be a part of a national movement to enable every person in Canada to hear the gospel by the year 2000. Prompted by some key Christian leaders, the Evangelical Fellowship of Canada initiated a National Task Force on Evangelism in 1987 with 31 grassroots workers representing a wide range of churches and ministries. From that modest beginning, Vision 2000 Canada has emerged with over 120 Christian leaders involved in eight strategy groups researching and planning for evangelism through the last decade of this century. Vision 2000 seeks to serve the body of Christ in evangelism not by offering programs per se but by encouraging various groups to develop plans that will work for them.

It is exciting to know that the OBC student council's commitment to mobilize students to reach out to neighbors

Getting closer

"The Commitment to Excellence campaign only needs $174,000 before ground can be broken for the Seminary expansion."

That was the word in mid-July. At that time, $2,098,000 in gifts and pledges had been given. For this we thank our God and our friends. Waiting has been hard for everyone; students look forward to using the promised preaching lab and worshiping in a chapel instead of a crowded classroom. Faculty anticipate the benefits of being together. At present some camp out in the College administration building.

Next step

Our next goal is to raise $1.3 to cover the total campaign goals of $3.7 million. Already we have had people honor family and friends with a commemorative gift for building rooms or supplying furnishings. If you wish to ask about this, you may contact the President or the Campaign office.

Meech is Dead

I can still see that headline in one of our Toronto newspapers. What a surge of emotion it generated - and still does - anger, fear, disappointment, disgust, uncertainty and many such concerns for the future of our nation. Undoubtedly, there are very waxes that spread across Jerusalem and Judah centuries ago when the people heard "Uzziah is dead." In spite of the ages, when Uzziah died, the nation never prospered. After all, he had reigned for 52 years and had been one of their better kings. Isaiah went to the temple - presumably, looking for consolation and hope in a time of personal and national grief. He got more than he bargained for.

The Lord drew aside the curtain and gave Isaiah a glimpse into the throne room of heaven. While the throne in Judah was empty, the throne in heaven was occupied. "Uzziah is dead, but I am alive!"

In times of personal and national crisis, there is a calm and security that comes with a peek into heaven's throne room. My prayer has been that the events of Meech will turn many hearts toward God. He is on the throne!

Unity within Diversity

Update recently asked a few of the OBC/OTS family for comments after the death of the Meech Lake agreement.

Phillippe Harnepart, BTh '82, MTS '88, now pastors the Evangelical Church of St. Hubert, Quebec. Philippe asked other churches across Canada for continued support for Quebec churches. He said that in the past when there have been troubles in the "Constitutional talks," when it comes to the Gospel this is not helpful. "When it comes to illustrate how Christ can help overcome language barriers, Philippe said that of the 390 churches participating in the recent Billy Graham Crusade, Mission Quebec, where Leighton Ford stepped in for the convalescing Billy Graham, 60 per cent were French and the rest Anglo. All worked together in "great harmony."

Mark Frogley, BTh '76, associate pastor, Alta Vista Baptist Church, Burnaby, British Columbia, said that the reaction in the West has not been as intense as in Quebec and Ontario because people feel fairly removed from the scene.

His overall concern is Christians in the West take seriously the potential ramifications for the nation and for ministry in Canada.

Mark urges the Church to show the power of the Gospel. He said, "The challenges for the Church as the country sees itself flat into fragmentation, is that we as believers model unity and strength, that we build across denominational lines."

Carol Tapin, a part-time Seminary student working on her MDiv, and on staff at Christian Directions, Montreal, drew on her background as a student in the West as well her knowledge of her home province.

Carol asked for understanding, particularly of the cultural differences. One concern was that "even among Christians," the perception of people in Quebec was distorted; she attributed this to the media. She hopes people will really learn what is going on and what it means to Quebec to have a secure sense of identity.

She said that the sense of "freedom and joy" that has come with Quebecers feeling they can now decide their future, is understandable. But she commented that since only Christ can give a lasting identity, this time of change is a strategic opportunity for the Church to play and work for reconciliation and spiritual awakening.

THE SPIRIT, THE CHURCH, AND THE WORLD: THE MESSAGE OF ACTS
John R.W. Stott (Downers Grove, Ill.: InterVarsity Press, 1990, 405 pp., $23.95)

John Stott's latest book, a commentary on the Book of Acts, will serve as a useful study guide to those willing to wrestle with the significance of the early church as a pattern for today's Christian community. Stott has written this book (published in Britain under the title The Message of Acts in the Bible-Speaks) with usual clarity which Stott and practical application.

Stott leads us through the ups and downs of the Church's life from the experience of Pentecost in Jerusalem to the imprisonment of Paul in Rome. Relying on commentators from John Chrysostom to John Calvin to C. Campbell Morgan to James Dunn, Stott gives a lively exegesis which inter-acts widely with Acts scholarship.

Especially to be noted are Stott's treatment of glossolalia in Acts 2 where he argues that the Pentecost phenomenon was intelligible languages and that the 1 Corinthians experience is to be assimilated to it. His evaluation of Wumber's signs and wonders movement in light of Acts 4-30 where Stott argues we should neither describe miracles as "never happening," nor as "evangelical occurrences," neither as "irresponsible" nor as "normal," and Stott's examination of the baptism of the Holy Spirit arising from his study of the Samaritan believers in Acts 8.

Also significant are his study of the status of non-Christian religions in the context of the conversion of the God-fearing and devout Cornelius of Acts 10; his review of Paul's missionary policy and its implications for church structure; his examination of the role of apologetics in preaching and evangelism in Paul's Areopagus speech in Acts 17; and the lessons for urban evangelism drawn from Paul's experience in Corinth and Ephesus in Acts 18 and 19.

In summary, this book leads one into the heart of the Book of Acts with an eye to the life of the church today. For that reason it will be welcomed by pastors, teachers and followers of Jesus who believe their acts in the world are to be informed by the Holy Spirit's work in the Acts of the Apostles.

Missions - All Ages, All Places

by George Cox

No matter which season of life we are in, God can use us for the advancement of his kingdom. In 1993 I was given the opportunity to retire (after 32 years) from my position at IBM where I served and developed computers. In praying about this opportunity, my wife Shirley and I felt the Lord's leading to go to Bible college.

Our prayers led us to Ontario Bible College where we elected to study for one year. We were interested in working with a missions organization and felt it necessary to increase our Bible knowledge through formal training.

Since we were in our 50s, we were a little hesitant about being in classes with students in their 20s. The friendliness and acceptance of other students quickly dispelled these fears. Faculty and staff also put us at ease, among them were the then dean of students Minnam Salmers, and professors Gordon Wright and John Franklin. We soon joined in debates and discussions with other students.

Studies also brought Shirley and I closer to each other and with God. We discovered that learning can be fun in John Franklin's class. Skits that our fellow students created produced rounds of laughter while revealing important truths. The choir tour to Nova Scotia under the direction of John Bell, was a time rich in memories. There was a closeness in the choir that only God can develop.

Still seeking God's will in our lives, Shirley and I gradually realized that dedication of their lives to further God's great command "Go ye into all of Christ, and preach there the Gospel."

As we look back over the years we have seen God's handiwork in our lives. Each step has been under his direction. Such was the case as I assumed responsibility for the total supervision of Campus Operations, then freed the previous supervisor, Tom Oliver, and family to go to Africa with the African Inland Mission.

Now, as Shirley and I pass on the direction of Campus Operations to the younger generation we look to the future, not to sit in our rocking chairs but to go ahead in the "Armor of God" and step forward into a new path. Now is not the time to retire (as in rest) but "re-tire" (as in putting new tires on old wheels) and to continue in God's work.

George Cox retired as manager of Campus Facilities in June.

Alumni Network Supports Students

In May, from Monday to Thursday, the general office at the Seminary became by night "call-central" for this year's very successful Alumni phoneathon.

The success was more than financial. The 16 student callers, an average of eight a night, contacted a total of 2,039 out of a possible 3,650 alumni for OBC/OTS. In June and July, callers followed up on those missed in May. Eleanor Engbers, our alumni secretary, who that hearing calls to people across Canada and the United States helped her appreciate the alumni network. The contacts also gave the College and Seminary an opportunity to update records

This year's total of more than $137,500 in gifts and pledges compares with $17,024 given last year. A move to a more intensive program, pledges spread over three years, and keen alumni interest in the projects contributed to the increase in support.

This year the alumni phoneathon gifts and pledges centred on two areas: the Commitment to Excellence campaign for the College retrofit and Seminary expansion, and financial aid for students. The latter is part of a focus by the Institutional Advancement Department and the OBC Community Life Department to expand the financial assistance options available for students.

Minor Prophets, Major Encounters

By Dr. Donald Leggett

After years of teaching about suffering in the minor prophets, this year I met some students over-zealous who gave me a deeper appreciation of the cost of commitment. In January, my wife Linda and I worked in Kenya at Scot Theological College, a sister institution to Ontario Bible College. It was established by the Africa Inland Mission and is now part of the Africa Inland Church.

For 10 days, three hours a day, I taught a survey course on the minor prophets to 23 students. Most were from Kenya, but some had come from Rwanda, Zambia, Tanzania and Ethiopia.

In addition, I took a week of chapels. That week I, took a week of chapels from Hakakut and Haaga, which then saved some class time and also hopefully enabled me to demonstrate the task of preaching from the prophets.

Linda processed books in the school library, some sent previously by OBC students and some by young people at my church in London, ON.

I came away impressed with the dedication of the students. One former school teacher invited us to meet his wife and four children. One was an abandoned girl they had adopted. His struggle to make ends meet represents the hardships which face many.

Two Ethiopians in my class had been imprisoned for their faith. I didn't know this during the first lecture when I cited the way the minor prophets modelled suffering for their faith, as one reason for their importance. Afterwards it humbled me to realize how little we in Canada know what suffering means. A veteran missionary statesman recently recommended to OTS students that pastors visit the mission field as a means of increasing missionary vision in the local Church. I heartily agree.

Donald Leggett is OTS professor of Old Testament.
